NEGLECTED STREETS

East Side Thoroughfares in a Terrible Condition.

LEAST SWEEPING WHERE MOST NEEDED

Many Tenement House Districts Threatened with Malaria.

SUGGESTIONS WORTH NOTING

where people of little or no consequence in the social scale reside, and Water and Cherry streets may be quoted as examples. There are exceptions, however, as in the case of the Five Points, which, since it was newly paved, is almost as clean to look at on a fine day as Fifth avenue itself. There is no reason why such streets as Water and Cherry should not be kept in as good order as the Five Points, and some people beieve it would be sound sanitary policy to neglect, if of population as Cherry street be swept and made wholesome to live in every day. Hundreds of streets without the use of a broom on them for a whole week; but there are streets in the crowded parts of the city down town, on both the east and west sides, that urgently demand sweeping every day.

WHERE THE DIST ABOUNDS.

Among the streets on the east side noticed yesterday by a Hunand reporter as being in need of the broom and the ash cart were North William street, and before the following numbered houses there was abundance of work for the scavengers of the Street Cleaning Bureau:—Nos. 237, 233 and 229, barrels and boxes of garbage overflowing on the sidewalk and out upon the street; Nos. 225 and 232, a mass of mud and refuse, and the same before Nos. 216 and 218. The whole block requires a thorough cleaning, but there was no trace of a scavenger anywhere.

In front of Adam Lederle's beer saloon, on Duane street, off Chatham, was a beastly collection of filth. and there was much black slime, mingled with straw and manure, opposite Nos. 2, 9 and 13.

In Rose street, where the poor and lowly dwellers are numerous, a long channel of yellow, stagnant water lay by the curbstone opposite Nos. 28, 30 and 32; a dead and long defunct cat was stretched out in front of No. 29, a box of recking garbage stood before No. 24, and in front of Nos. 2, 8, 11, 13 and 15 were tw-

A resident of the street said to the reporter: "Well, I suppose it ain't worth while sweeping an old street like this, and that's the reason why it is this way. I remember a time, though, when it was as clean a street as any in the city and respectable peoclean a street as any in the city and respectable peo-ple lived here. They give it a wipe once in a while, but I guess they say to themselves any kind of street will do for the poor devils that live here now." Frankfort street is in a bad way and ought to be both paved and cleaned. There were dirty spots ob-served yesterday facing Nos. 25, 27, 29, 37 and 34. Large cobblestones had been uprooted and the holes they formerly filled were full of fiith. Streams of firty water were running over the sidewalks from the houses. The gutters in New Chambers street re-quire cleaning out. cleaning out. osevelt street must have been neglected for some Roosevelt street must have been neglected for some time, as its appearance yesterday was perfectly disgraceful. In front of No. 89 stood a big tub of garbage that must have been accumulating for several days, and attention is directed to the state of affairs before the following houses:—Nos. '3, '75, '77, '74, '76, '78, '95, '97, '99, '126 and '123. Mind and water, cabbage leaves, handfuls of straw refuse, sawdust, horse manure, ashes, old shoes and shreds of clothing were strewn about in heterogeneous confusion.

A SUGGESTION FOR THE BURKAU.

Thomas Redigan, who keeps a saloon on the corner of the street, and was engaged at the time sweeping his sidewalk and threatening the mischievous boys who were raiding the ashberrels with the dirty end of his broom, said:—'If they want to keep this street all right they must take away the contents of these garbage and ash barrels every night. That barrel there (pointing to one of his own) hasn't been emptied in three days, and there's ne place to put any more refuse, unless we throw it in the street. Then, again, they should sweep the street in the daytime, when they can see where the dirt is, in place of coming along at night when you can hardly see your hand, and when nobody can tell whether they do the sweeping or not. These boys you see there give us a tot of trouble, but it wouldn't be so bad if the ash cartimen came along every night and emptied the barrels, because then these boys wouldn't have a chance of tumbling the stuff out on the street.'

"Why is it that gutter is so full of water?" asked the reporter.

"That's because we have to sweep it out ourselves

"Why is it that guiter is at the reporter.
"That's because we have to sweep it out ourselves and flood it with water to keep it clean. When the water is let run it will carry off the dirt with it down to the sewer."

Water street, beginning at the lower part of it, where the commercial warehouses end, and extending up along parallel to the East River for many blocks, is uniformly flithy and badly paved. Of course the people who live on both sides of it may see nothing offensive in the dirt and perhaps think the street rather clean than otherwise, but that is because they have been long accustomed to the sight. If clean gutters and sidewalks are needed anywhere it is here, where children swarm and pass their lives in the street. Opposite the following houses the dirt spots were most conspicuous:—Nos. 273, 275, 277, 327, 337, 337, 331, 341, 343, 349, 351, 381, 399, 392, 404, 406 and 40c. All that part of Water between Pike and Rutgers streets is in a filthy state. The street was particularly bad in front of the last three mentioned numbers.

streets is in a filthy state. The street was particularly bad in front of the last three mentioned numbers.

Cherry street, to which attention was drawn in a former article in the Heratio, was almost as bad as ever, but the weather being fine and dry somewhat mitigated its appearance. The pavement of the street is in the worst possible state, full of ruts and depressions in which the dirt lodges and sticks pertinaciously for a whole season. It is a populous tenement house street and needs careful looking after to keep malarial diseases out of it. Infront of the following houses were unlovely looking dirt heaps:—Nos. 53, 61, 73, 75, 79, 24, 154, 158, 144, 446, 448 and 552.

"Did you ever see this street swept?" asked the reporter of a man with a battered hat and a blue checked shirt who was sitting on the top step of an ancient stoop, up which, perhaps, in times long gone by dainty and aristocratic feet have ascended.

"Well, now, you puzzle me entirely," he answered, taking his pipe out of his mouth. "It's niver thinkin' I am av whin the ould sthreet was swep', but it's how the devil I'll thry to git out of if. But as you ax me the question I'm bound to say I niver seen anybody in this sthreet sweepin' except the neighbors and a rew ould codgens that come along now and thin with a bly rake of a broom and take it any to themselves, getherin' up the dirt in little hapes here and there. That s all the sweepin' I seen, an the divil a bit of good I ever saw it do. It's the same ould sthreet it always was and always will be."

In Peck slip, before Nos. 31, 35 and 37 and in Front street, facing Nos. 24, 262 and 281, mnd as black as ink was remarked.

In Power street a dead cat lay opposite No. 37, and several pails of ashes and garbage were spilled over the addensity of the server of the sidewalk at Nos. 33, 36 and 41.

The gratters in Oliver street, facing Nos. 55, 67 and 69, were covered with black siline, from which there was a very perceptible exhalation. The street is greatly in need of a new pavement, the cobbie water on which about a paifful of garbage was feating.

John Hogan, flying opposite here, said: —'I expect streets like this are always neglected. It isn't much of a thoroughfare, and it is only the people living in it who care about whether it is clean or dirty, but I think thoy ought to be looked after as well as other tolks, for there are some men in this street who pay a good deal in taxes in the year."

On Market street, at Nos. 73 and 81, there is work for the scavengers in the way of removing two immense heaps of refuse that encumber the roadway.

On Jefferson street, a Nos. 52 and 54, were overloaded barrels of ashes and garbage.

Montgomery street, near its eastern end, was conspicuous among the neglected streets. In front of No. 46 was a large mound of coal dust, mingled with straw and horse manure, and deep rue full of the piackest mud and dirt were noticeable before Nos. 52, 88, 60 and 62.

PROVIDENCE CLEANS SOME STREETS.

plackest mud and dirt were noticeable before Nos. 52, 88, 60 and 62.

A group of men standing in front of a blacksmith's thop on this street were asked how it was so much mud and refuse had accumulated in so quiet a thoroughfare, and one of them replied, "Well, when nobedy comes to take it away it is bound to collect. There hasn't been a man with a dirt cart down here in a menth of sundays," "This is one of the streets, observed another, "that they leave to Providence to clean and charge to the city. If they hadn't such streets as this to fall back upon their wouldn't be any profit in the job. There's about a dozen streets like this up above here that never get a lick till the rain comes, and then the rain does the whole of it."

ANGLEST STRIKETS GONE TO THE DOOS.

Monroe is an old street, where some of the rich business element of the city once had their residences. It is now among the neglected ones and has a tepressed and slovenly air. It was very unclean in posts—opposite Nos. 114, 176, 180, 186, 218, 240, 318 and 428.

seen sprawling over the sides of pails and boxes and spreading out into the street.

Cherry street, between this point and Jackson street, greatly demands looking after.

Jackson street is pretty much as bad as Scammell, and the dirt is more especially noticeable opposite Nos. 51, 53, 49, 42, 38 and 57.

In Corlears silp the mud was deep and loamy, and spread along the street in front of the houses numbered 23, 27, 29 and 31.

Mangin street was undergoing purification judging from the freshly gathered heaps of refuse that extended along its surface, but off Mangin, between Goerck and Lewis streets, was an alleyway reeking with fifth that had evidently not been touched with a broom in a year.

with fifth that had evidently not been touched with a broom in a year.

Evidences of the activity of the Street Cleaning Bureau were also observable on Lewis street for a good portion of its length, but there were spots still untouched in front of Nos. 48, 50, 51, 64, 79, 81, 83, 107, 109, 121, 163 and 164.

Cannon street, opposite Nos. 3, 5, 15, 19, 35 and 45, was in a most unwholesome condition, and at No. 220 Delances street three pails of garbage were cripping their contents on the sidewalk. Dirt heaps that had been some days collected were scattered about in front of Nos. 292, 297 and 298.

Rivington street, a crowded tenement house locality, was in places quite disreputable, and these were facing Nos. 369, 311, 313, 315 and 319. Before the latter number the condition of the roadway is a disgrace to the city, and between Goerck street and the fast River no broom had, to all appearances, been seen in a year.

Goerck street had been partially swept, but unless the raked up piles of refuse are soon carted away the street will be as bad as before.

The east end of Third street, between Lewis and the East River, is in a neglected condition.

THE BATTLE OF THE CORONERS.

The battle between Coroner Wiggins and Coroner Parslow, of Hoboken, for the possession of the re-mains of John G. Gandesberger, the young man who resided at No. 38 Mulberry street, this city, and whose hody was found in the river near Hoboken on Wednesday, terminated yesterday in the holding of an inquest by Coroner Wiggins. Gandesberger was employed by Fisher & Co., liquor dealers in Baxter street, and on the 8th inst. he went to Jersey City Heights to deliver some liquor. After leaving Oblien's saleon, in New York avenue, he started for the saleon of Joseph E. Taylor, in Spring atreet, West Hoboken. He never reached the piace and was never heard of again until his body was recovered in the river on Wesinesday. Coroner Parslow first took charge of the body, but County Physicism Converse ordered it to be removed to Crane's Morgue, and there the fight between the Coroners began. Mr. Crane desired to have the body removed from Parslow's undertaking establishment to his own, which would entitle him to the receipt of morgue fees from the county. Coroner Parslow also wanted the mergue fees and refused to deliver the body on the County Physician's order. The last named official then directed Coroner Wiggins to hold an inquest, taking the entire matter from Mr. Parslow's hands. Thus the matter ended, but the action of the County Physician will, it is thought, come before the Board of Freeholders for investigation.

At the inquest heid by Coroner Wiggins evidence nesday, terminated yesterday in the holding of an investigation.

At the inquest held by Coroner Wiggins evidence was brought out showing that Gandesberger suffered from the effects of sunstroke for several years and at times was demented. It was thought that during one of these spells he wandered to the river and was drowned. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

JACKSON-HUNT.

The conclusion of the Jackson-Hunt case was reached yesterday, before Judge J. F. Daly, in the Court of Common Pleas. The action, as will be remembered, was brought to recover some $30,000 membered, was brought to recover some $30,000 which the plaintiff, as alleged, gave to the defendant under a promise of marriage. The case has occupied several weeks and has been hotly contested. Yesterday the defendant was examined in surrebuttal and denied that she ever toid Emma campbell that she had promised to marry the plaintiff, but dish't mean to do so. She was then cross-examined at great length about a mortgage which she raised, with a view to showing that she was not so affluent at the time in question as she represented herself to be. Other withesses were examined, but their testimony was unimportant. The counsel will submit their briefs next week.

Judge Murray held the prisoner in $1.000 bail to answer.

The "Square-Back" Target Company is an organization of which Daniel F. Lane, who keeps a liquor saloon at No. 331 Pearl street, and Michael McCarthy, who resides in Cherry street, are members. Last evening, while Lane sat on an empty lager beer barrel in front of his store he discussed the affairs of the company with McCarthy. In the course of argument they differed as to certain doings of the organization, and McCarthy suddenly plunged a knife into Lane's back, inflicting a severe, though not dangerous wound. McCarthy then escaped, and, though at least half a dozen officers were on the lookout for him, he had not been arrested up to a late hour last night. Lane was taken to the Chambers Street Hospital.

NAVAL GOLD LACE.

AMERICAN UNIFORMS TO BE MODELLED ON FOREIGN PATTERNS-WASHINGTON TAILORS ON CIAL DRESS PROPOSED.

It has been rumored in naval circles for several weeks that a change in the uniform of officers of the navy was contemplated, but as nothing definite could be learned that such a change was to be made no in-terest was attached to the rumor. About a week ago an officer in Washington learned a new uniform circular was in print and was about to be promulgated, and upon making further inquiry it was learned that the new circular was advised by three officers without the cognizance of any other officers of the service. The proposed changes are absolutely objectionable to the officers, and are much in accord with the English style, which is objectionable to English officers. The officers of the navy feel so indignant that the uniform as at present, so thoroughly American in its simplicity and style, distinct in itself and so well known all over the world, should be changed to a uniform neither American nor English, but more the latter than anything, that they have resolved to make determined protest against any change, for the above and several other reasons:—

and several other reasons:

THE CHECLAR.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20, 1878.

Undress and Service Prock Coat—Hereafter the service frock ceat will have but fourteen instead of eighteen buttons on the breast—seven in occh row.

Vests—For all officers will be single breasted, no collar, with five small may buttons in front, and made of navy bine cloth, fine bine flannel or of saitable white material. Overcoats—To be of dark blue pilot or beaver cloth, double breasted, turned down collar, collar faced with same kind of cloth as the coat, two rows of large may buttons on the breast—soven in each row. Skirts to be full, communing at the hip bone and descending thence six inches below the knee, with one button behind on each hip and one near the hottom of the packet in each fold. The coat to fit loosely, but sufficiently close to enable the sword to be voror over it. To have one outside breast pocket and two hip pockets cut to binguist, Cuffs to be closed and plain. On each one of the collar of the overcoat the same devices of rank and corps shall be worn respectively as authorized for necks.

the shoulder loops now prescribed.

R. W. THOM'SON, Secretary of the Navy.

THE HARDSHIP OF THE MEASURE.

The first paragraph, changing from nine buttons to seven in row on each side of the front, not only renders the purchase of a new coat necessary because of the superduous buttonholes, involving an expense of $70 or $75, but is entirely unmilitary. No objection is made to the change in the vest nor of the overcoat, except that it does away with the cape. There is a change in the shape of the cap and the visor, being entirely English in its style, the sloping peak being neither military nor pleasant in its style. The gold cord around the front of the cap is to be abolished, a plain leather strap taking its place, and the present cap device of an eagle surmounting a shield, which is both plain and unique, is to be replaced by an (English) gold laurel wreath enclosing a silver eagle perched upon a foul anchor. The proposed embroidery on the cap is new in the service and entirely English. The abolition of shoulder straps will make the coat look bare and cause the officers to more resemble a police force than a military branch of the public service.

This applies to both the active and retired officers. The former get barely enough now to keep up a respectable appearance, and the latter, disabled in the service, got barely sufficient to buy the commonest clothes. And yet the officers must provide themselves with these changes immediately on the promulgation of this order. A petition with more than a hundred signatures has been forwarded to Secretary Thompson from this station asking that the order be rescinded. Similar petitions have been sent from League Island, Boston and other naval stations, claiming that theere is no need of any change.

JERSEY CITY BANK TROUBLES.

The announcement in the HERALD of the complaint against the directors of the Mechanics and Laborers' Savings Bank of Jersey City created considerable excitement in that city yesterday, and caused a suspen-sion of the rush of depositors to the bank to sign the proposition of the directors to prevent the Two northeres.

interviewed as to their view of the complaint, said that Mr. Furey, the complainant, should have waited until the Grand Jury had begun its session and laid his charges before that body instead of bringing the matter into such prominence as he did.

Judge Meenan, who issued warrants for the arrest of the directors and placed them in the hands of Constable Feeley for service, was found in his office last evening. He said that no arrests had been made, but that several directors had been notified that warrants had been issued for their arrrest and they promised to present themselves with bail. Constable Feeley says that he visited the residence of the former president, Mr. John Halliard, and also the office of the State Insurance Company, but failed to find him. In the evening Mr. Gilbert Collins, Mr. Halliard's counsel, visited the Judge and said that Mr. Halliard would furnish whatever bail was required to-morrow. Although the Judge assured the reporter that no arrests had been made Mr. James Furey, the complainant, later in the evening just as positively stated that several of the directors had been arrested and had given bail.

A director of the bank and smember of the Excentive Committee said that there was even now underhand work going on in the institution.

A meeting of the depositors was held last night at Glaser's Hall, on First street, which was presided over by Mr. Henry Markham. A large number of the poorer depositors were present. A motion was adopted providing for the appointment of a committee to secure able counsel and learn in what manner the greatest amount of the bank's assets could be secured to the depositors and to take steps for the appointment of a receiver.

CAPTURED IN COURT.

CAPTURED IN COURT.

Frederick Banfield, alias Brown, was at the bar in Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday before Judge organ, who had just held him to answer a charge of having stolen a veil from Mrs. Domenaire on Sixth avenue. His counsel was trying to raise legal points objections against the prisoner's detention the "trivial accusation," when Detective Price, of the Twenty-ninth precinct, clinched Price, of the Twenty-ninth precinct, clinched the matter by saying, "I don't want's to interfere with another officer's prisoner, Your Henor, but it there is any doubt about his guilt on this charge there is very little about that of one for burglary which I have to prefer against him. He robbed his grandfather's premises some time ago, and was seen in the act by that gentleman's wife, but he escaped. We have been looking for him ever since and have not been able to catch him. He is regarded by us up town, although a young man, as one of the most expert thieves in the business."

Banfield, alias Brown, was turned over to the officer without further ceremony, and will now be tried for burglary instead of petit larceny.

FROM WANT TO CRIME

Sophia Lay, of No. 50 West Forty-ninth street, was passing through Church street yesterday, carrying or pocketbook in her hand. A youth named Albert McNally snatched it from her and ran away. Officer McDermoit, of the Twenty-seventh precinet, who saw the theft, chased McNaily and captured him. At the Tombs Police Court he said he had been out of work for some time: that he had not eaten anything for two days, and was driven by want to attempt robbery. He was committed for trial in $1,000 bail.

WALL STREET, SATURDAY, Nov. 30, 1878.

Whether it was that the buils were belated this morning or that the bears put in an unusually early appearance, certain it is that the stock market showed a weakening tendency and gave way a fraction or two from opening prices. This condition of de pression was, however, of short duration. An arrival of the bulls in force quickly carried things their own way, and before noon the decline had been recovered from and stocks sent booming. This favorable effect was most particularly experienced by the St. Paul shares, next to them by the Northwesterns and next again by Lake Shore. It is beginning to be inquired why the Northwestern preferred stock should be seiling at 77½ when the St. Paul preferred stock is selling at 71½. For four years back the latter stock has divided seven per cent per annum, irregularly the Northwestern stock it is true, but surely, while the Northwestern stock of the same grade has offered nothing better than uncertain and paroxysmal responses to the demands of stockholders. It is the fashion to-day, however, to back the Northwesterns for a rise, and as a general thing they get the cream of popular attention and the bulk of the day's business. Reports of extraordinary carnings continue to be widely disseminated—a mat-ter of $16,000 being given as the increase for the sixth day of the fourth week in November—but there is nothing said about the sparse earnings of last year and the almost entire stoppage of business as a result of the then existing mud blockade. A continuance of the greased pole business was again observable in Lake Shore to-day. The price, after clambering up to 70%, slipped back to 69% and there rested at the close. The point of 50, or within a fraction thereof, seems to present a stumbling block insur-mountable to Jew or Gentile. A fresh rattling of the dry bones of the ordinarily torpid stocks was displayed to-day by a revived activity in the C., C. and I. C. shares, which advanced from $5% to $6 per share. The first mortgage bonds were even stronger in comparison, sales having been made as high as $8. When the price of these securities was at 43 some three months ago we had occasion to suggest that the buyer would find "money in them," and the correctness of the surmise is proved by to-day's quotations. Friends of the property who have been patiently waiting for Judge Harlan's decision expect it within a few days; are confident, from the testi-mony offered at the trial, that it must be made in their favor, and are free buyers of the stock upon this supposition. A decision in favor of the company would require a paying over of some twenty-eight per cent of back interest by the Pennsylvania Railroad upon outstanding bonds, and should tavorably effect the values of both bonds and stock. The share market, which had shown Samsonian strength up to two o'clock, began to yield at ersault. The paramount and pernicious influence which brought about the decline was traced to the Gold Room. In a desperate attempt to break the share market Gould appeared as a buyer of gold at 1003,—his intention being to squeeze money and break stocks. This is a pretty dirty sort of business for an individual, but it is dirtier yet for the National Bank, which is helping him, if there is any sort of credence to be lent to street reports. A malcontent of the Gould description who deliberately endeavors to thwart the execution of the nation's will, as ex-pressed in the act of resumption, merits a short shift, if not a merry one, and in most other countries
